

ABSTRACT

An aesthetically interesting stretchable belt can be worn at varying heights along a person's torso and is particularly appropriate for individuals who fluctuate in weight and for those who wear the modern low-rise style pants. The preferred embodiment of the belt wraps around once plus an extension overlap for extra hugging of the hips. An alternative embodiment wraps around the wearer twice. The elastic belt features holes for increased elasticity. The holes also serve to incorporate a visual symbol in a surface of the belt in an aesthetically appealing manner.
